“ I was saddened to hear of David's passing. I met him shortly after he moved to Belmont as I ended up in his old job in New York. A few years later I moved out to California too. Dave was serious about his work but otherwise he was a joker. I recall that he was proud that he could recite the whole Mr. Ed Show theme song. We were neighbors and Dave always had something going on -- a Eric Clapton show at Shoreline Amphitheater to his favorite Thai restaurant in San Francisco. And he was curiously spendthrift about particular things. On a road trip he and I and my then-wife took out to the beach at Half Moon Bay, he insisted finding free parking on a side street rather than paying the dollar or two at the parking lot. Dave is sorely missed.
