“ I had the honor and privilege of being Lee’s insurance agent for several years during the 80s-90s before my career path led me to the corporate headquarters in Minnesota. I have since retired and returned to the area in recent years. I remember Lee as a tough and astute businessman who was both demanding and fair, characteristics which surely contributed to his success. My company specialized in protecting petroleum marketers across the nation, an industry which presented a myriad of complex risks. Lee respected this expertise. Over time we developed mutual respect for one another and, as I recall, once business issues were addressed, some time to share a few pleasant moments talking about his love of the Great Lakes. I had taken on a new hobby of salmon fishing in Lake Michigan which opened the door to some fun and light chats about his time out on the water. As I look back at those formative days of my career in Iron Mountain, I was most fortunate to have developed trusting working relationships with several family business leaders in Dickinson County. Among these distinguished entrepreneurs were petroleum marketers like Bill, George and John Bertoldi, Denny LaFaive, Penny Andreini and Lee Lofstrom, special folks who had put their trust in me to protect their life’s work. Lee was a successful man for all the right reasons. Rest in peace, good sir. Dick Sherwood, Iron Mountain.

“ To the family of Lee and Bobbi, our sincere condolences. Lee was a more senior graduate who I always admired; Bobbi was our neighbor with whom I had many enjoyable times as a child. When they married, I thought it was a wonderful match. I moved from Iron Mountain, therefore, I lost contact and missed the growth of this marvelous family. May their memories be a blessing. “ I knew Lee as a young man when his parents built their home on Witch Lake. My parents were also neighbors on Oslo Ave years before when George owned the gas station. Lee was always so friendly and spent many evenings at our Witch Lake home watching TV and visiting. Sincerest condolences,

“ So sad to read about the death of Lee...He was a classmate of mine and his wife Bobbi was my best friend through grade school and high school. I will always remember both of them in prayer and smile about our friendships.
